WILLIAM R. NICHOLSON. President Land Title and Trust Co.

"The greatest menace to America's property is its own induigence and love for fururies. Today we are on the crest of a notable industrial wave, and that wave will not recede unless America hoses its nerve personally I do not entertain any fear concerning our ability in that fine, for we are the most resourceful people in the world. and have the ability to adapt ourselves to

This is how William R. Nicholson, president of the Land Title and Trust Company and one of Philadelphia's notable financial figures, epitomized business conditions dur-Ing an interview this morning.

Optimism is the dominating element in

He admits that he has felt the tremorn of a depression, but asserts that the depression is really imaginary and due to causes that are natural and easily dis-

A MATTER OF PERSPECTIVE

Thus income prosperity, he says, its largely a matter of perspective, and never in my business career have I viewed a cioudlessity, for the gloomy-sided individual is always with us.

"When we entered the war a certain section of the people began to cry depression. They implated that the 'wolf would be at four door within thirty days, but nothing like that has happened. And nothing like that will happen unless America decides to try in the wolf by trying to practice a self-lish and impractical economy. This is a problem that is up to the average man and the average woman. I don't believe they will accept the false philosophy of the calamity howlers."

Today the source of the interest of the light is received to the people began to cry depression. They implated that the 'wolf would be at five to a consurranted to give any time that the Petrices Kid. This is a problem that is up to the average man and the relistatement of a worker discharged and former of a worker discharged in the relistatement of a worker discha calamity howlers."

Today the average may and the average woman referred to by Mr. Nicholson, are doing considerable thinking. That they view the future with some misglyings he admits. How they can share his optimism and do their 'bit' toward keeping America on the present wave of prosperity is contained in the following bits of advice he

"To the average man who is drawing a weekly wage I offer these suggestions;

True Economy-Versus Cheapness

There are probably thousands of men in Philadelphia who buy their clothing now from one house, now from another, lured by extravagant advertising claims, and never feeling certain that they are getting value received.

Such men can find safe anchorage here.

We do not claim to sell you a $40.00 Suit for $20.00-neither can anyone do so and tell the truth. But we give you 100 cents' worth of value for every dollar you spend with us.

Just as an object lesson to yourself please test us on this statement. Many men are surprised to find that our regular prices are as low, or lower, than some of our competitors' fabulous bargain figures.

And, no matter what price you pay us, you will get full value in the quality and style of our garments.
